At the age of 15, Agatha arrived at the Motherhouse to begin her postulancy. Her blood sister, Sister Chrysostom, had also joined the community

As a teacher in the higher grades, she taught for 31 years in Philadelphia, Mananoy City, New Britian; Esplen, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

She had just begun a course in Lithuanian Studies in Fordham University in New York when she was taken to a hospital in New York after suddenly becoming ill. She was embraced by Sister Death approximately one week later.

In death, she shares a headstone with her beloved sister, Chrysostom, who died in 1994.
